

About

IT Freelancing was started back in 2005 and is the brain child of Brett James.

Brett started working with computers back in 1992 and has earned a BTEC National diploma in computer studies and an Hons Degree in Software Engineering.

From a career point of view Brett has worked in most areas of computing from selling, to building computers. From 1998 to 2005 he was an IT Manager for a firm in Birmingham, looking after three office Networks, building VPN wide area connections and supporting countless external customers.

Brett has also been involved in computer Journalism since 1996 where he has had countless published articles appearing in some of the top leading magazines such as PC Advisor, PC Plus, PC Format, Micro Mart, PDA-Essentials. Currently his own website Crowdedbrain is becoming extremely popular for technology news and reviews. Brett's journalist background has benefited many of his customers from him being able to offer up-to-date advise on the latest products and to gain better deals on product purchases.

IT Freelancing differs from the countless other IT Support players in the industry by means of having such a varied background of support skills. Price wise IT Freelancing is one of the cheapest support companies in the area and our motto is to give the customers great value for money and experience without having to pay over the top prices.
